The Smithsonian’s National Museum of American History invites applications for an Assistant Director, Education & Experience. This full-time, permanent position will oversee the daily operations and supervision of staff of NMAH’s Education & Experience Department, shaping and leading approaches that yield maximum impact and benefit for audiences and partners to advance the museum’s mission and goals. Core activities include developing, implementing, updating, and refining operational and strategic plans and policies; establishing criteria and written guidelines for education and audience experiences; infusing interpretive, educational, and audience-centered perspectives into exhibitions and programs; and advancing visitor accessibility and inclusion in all forms. This position will work under direct supervision of the Deputy Director for Public History.

Competitive candidates will have experience in managing education programs and developing audience experiences in a museum or cultural heritage institution. Experience is demonstrated through supervision of staff focused on education and audience engagement; preK-12 curriculum planning; the development, implementation, evaluation, and refinement of public programs; the establishment of criteria and written guidelines for public programs reaching diverse audiences; and the crafting of operational and strategic plans and policies that guide such work.

Starting Salary GS-15 - $155,700 per year, plus benefits.
